So sleep the Saints and cease to grone
When sin and death have done their worst
Christ hath a glory like his own
Which waits to clothe their sleeping dust.

Beneath this dust in ruin lies;
A man once virtuous, Just and wise,
He view'd his death approaching near;
And gave his life without a tear.
Now we commu with sacred trust
His body to the mouldring dust,
His soul we trust has wing'd its way
To realms of light and endless day.

A black and white photograph of a large, rectangular, light-colored stone monument. The monument features a decorative, carved border along its top and sides, consisting of a repeating scroll or leaf pattern. The stone is set in a cemetery, with other graves and foliage visible in the background. The lighting is somewhat dim, and the image has a slightly grainy texture.
